Hello,

We are looking for an ambitious programmer(s) who are looking to make a name for themselves. Our goal is to create a program that redefines the way people explain processes to each other via the computer medium.

We’ve all been there, sitting in front of the screen shots someone pulled from whatever program and shoved into power point. Clicking back and forth from the program you’re working in, to the pictures someone else has painstakingly edited, annoyed and trying to decipher the text attached to red arrows pointing all over the page. Or you’ve been on the flipside, trying to get your fellow employees to fill out their travel claims and getting inundated with questions throughout your workday. Or maybe showing a friend you’re tutoring how to build an excel spreadsheet via email while you’re out of town. These simple things can become difficult when people are at different skill levels and are not co-located and looking at the same screen. We want to make it simple.

Our aim is to create a program that will bridge that gap. This program has been well thought through (and is very soon to be patent pending) and needs a programmer to write it to LIFE! For all those times that building the PowerPoint tutorial or using screen recording software just doesn’t make sense. For all the times you wish you could just get your point across more quickly and accurately. For all the times you looked at the tools at your disposal and thought, “I can make this work but something else would work better”. This program will be that something else…

What we are looking for is a programmer (eventually a group of programmers) who is willing to nudge the snowball at the top of the mountain, create us Beta that we can use for testing (by a very reputable tester) and WHEN all goes well with the testing, we would like to bring our Beta programmers back to create the official version 1.0.

We know this will be a lengthy process and we know it’s going to take hard work for whatever programmers we hire, we do not take the skills you have lightly and we hope to truly build the right team for this undertaking from these humble beginnings and create something…very unique.

This program is poised to be great, we have all the other necessary pieces in place to build onto this Beta version rapidly. We look forward to working with you on it!

Sincerely

The Mirage Group

Applicants may respond to me at Benpit247@gmail.com to discuss details, once again, can’t wait to hear from you!